

AMNT co-chair David Weeks

▶ What is your pensions career CV?
My pensions career is short. In 2012 I was elected to the board of one of my occupational pension schemes. Later, I was elected by the Association of Member Nominated Trustees: firstly as a committee member and then as co-chair.

▶ What is your greatest work achievement so far?
In my earlier career I included stints in several government departments. I contributed material to the National Risk Register. Mass fatalities and contingency planning in the fire and rescue service were my specialities.

▶ What do you still wish to achieve?
I would like to continue to expand the membership and influence of the Association of Member Nominated Trustees. To date we have grown to 700 members, representing schemes with total assets under management of just under £700 billion. We say that is around one third of the total UK occupational pensions sector.

▶ What is your biggest regret within your career?
I am given to looking forward rather than to looking back. Benjamin Disraeli said “never complain; never explain”. I am inclined to go with that.

▶ Excluding your current role, what would be your dream pension job?
I think that all governments will need to keep pensions policy under constant review. It would be wonderful to be the Pensions Minister. Given that Theresa May is not likely to ask me, I would settle for the role of special adviser, or SPAD, as they are known in the civil service.
